The Yale Center for Business and the Environment (CBEY) educates and inspires interdisciplinary leaders through business solutions to systemic environmental problems.

CBEY joins the strengths of two world-renowned graduate schools—the Yale School of the Environment (YSE) and the Yale School of Management (SOM)—with a global network of thought leaders and practitioners working at the interface of business and the environment. Home to the oldest and nationally preeminent joint-degree program in business and the environment, CBEY addresses the need for both environmentally-minded business leaders and skilled managers in environmental organizations.

We're aware that systemic change takes time, so we engage in a wide range of activities to train business and environment leaders of tomorrow and address pressing global resource issues through three main avenues:

1. Education: Applied learning programs that stretch student experience at the intersection of environmental science, management, and business innovation
2. Research and Insights: Opportunities for collaborations between industry leaders, students, and faculty to conduct deep analysis and develop applied, immediate, and impactful solutions to sustainability challenges
3. Outreach: Connecting leading companies, NGOs, and policymakers with extensive networks of sustainability professionals, students, and faculty
