Travel during the Winter Recess

Sometimes students and their families make travel arrangements for the winter recess well in advance. However, because Yale College requires that students take their final examinations when they are scheduled, regardless of end-of-term travel plans, it is best to wait until you have submitted your course schedule for the fall term before making any travel arrangements for the winter recess. After you have made your final selection of courses in September, you will be able to determine the date of your last examination from a chart published in the Yale College Programs of Study (YCPS), which will be published on line during the summer.

If you must make travel arrangements before the fall term begins, bear in mind the possibility that you may have to take an exam as late as December 19, 2018 the last day of the final examination period for the fall term. The last examination is over at 5:30 p.m. on that day. In the heavy travel season at the end of the year, a minimum of three hours should be allowed for travel to Kennedy, LaGuardia, or Newark airports, and a minimum of two hours for travel to Bradley International Airport. Student rooms must be vacated by noon on Thursday, December 20, 2018 and will reopen for occupancy on Wednesday, January 9, 2019. All first-years are required to attend a registration meeting in their residential college on the evening of Monday, January 14, 2019. Spring-term classes begin on Tuesday, January 15, 2019.
