AN HOUR TEST INSTEAD OF AN EXAMINATION

Some instructors do not give final examinations of the usual two-and-one-half-hour or three-and-one-half-hour length, but instead terminate their courses with an hour test that is the last in a succession of hour tests administered during the term.

For courses that meet during the reading period, this hour test may be administered during the reading period, since, in such courses, regular class meetings are scheduled to extend through the reading period. A course that meets during reading period may also administer the hour test during final examination period at the time specified in the final examination schedule (http://catalog.yale.edu/ycps/final-examination-schedules).

For courses that do not meet during the reading period, the hour test may not be administered during the reading period, but may be administered only during the last week of classes or during the final examination period at the time specified in the final examination schedule (http://catalog.yale.edu/ycps/final-examination-schedules).
